

Transforming Pakistan: Ways out of instability (Adelphi Book 406)

Can Pakistan find a way out of violent instability? How severe are the problems of this strategically crucial country, and how much of a threat do they pose beyond Pakistan's borders? Has Pakistan become an ungovernable failed state? Hilary Synnott draws on his experience of Pakistan to argue that any strategy for addressing the country's problems requires a nuanced understanding of its turbulent history, the failings of successive governments and the weaknesses of core institutions. He sheds light on the role of Pakistan's army and its intelligence service in the power-play of domestic politics, and looks at how the army has used religion and the issue of Kashmir to maintain its own influence, often with disastrous consequences for the security of Pakistan and the wider world. Synnott rigorously analyses developments in Pakistan's volatile tribal regions, little understood in the West despite their profound implications for regional and international security, and examines the role of past events—especially since 11 September 2001—in generating the animosity that many Pakistanis feel towards the West today. Where does Pakistan go from here? Emphasising that there are no easy answers, Synnott explores how concerned outsiders might finally succeed in building durable relationships with Pakistan, and help to stabilise a country that has struggled with disordered politics and chronic insecurity since independence in 1947. Out of unrivalled experience, Hilary Synnott has produced a thorough and admirably clear description of the dilemmas that face the government of Pakistan, and therefore all those countries that have a deep interest in that country's future. Douglas Hurd, former British Foreign Secretary: A brilliant and badly needed analysis of what is happening and could happen in the state considered to be the most dangerous in the world. Understanding Pakistan is one of the most difficult analytical jobs today. Synnott does a superb job in making us see the reality and trends that lie below the surface. Ahmed Rashid, author of Taliban and Descent into Chaos: The Worlds Most Unstable Region and the Threat to Global Security Hilary Synnott was British High Commissioner in Islamabad from 2001 to 2003, and the Coalition Provisional Authoritys Regional Coordinator for South Iraq in 2003 and 2004. Before joining the diplomatic service, he was a submariner in the Royal Navy. He was a Senior Consulting Fellow at the IISS.
